Biographical Information:

The Bible refers to the Principalities as those in charge of nations and great cities. It even calls them the protectors of religion or spirituality, and says that they've been known to escort people to heaven. Regardless of whether the Principalities are portrayed as protectors or as being as strong as fire, this highest phylum is described as having great power and being close to the throne of God.

The anima of Father God's army is the lion, appropriately symbolic as the king of beasts. The element of the Principalities is fire, which is one of the most powerful cleansing elements. Their stone is sapphire, which has always been linked with royalty, and their wings are gold, which has always been considered one of the most precious of metals and is associated with kings. Principalities are known to have high intelligence, and they carry golden spears.

Without much movement, they can send their powers outward. They're more likely to come and stand as sentinel figures around us, in small groups of two or three. They seem to be static in nature, standing silently rather than moving with agility. Like the guards of an English king or queen, they can't be made to smile or smirk.

They reflect Om, the Father God, in the sense of almost sustaining a protective energy in which other angels can go about the business at hand. The Principalities may stand still, but don't ever mistake their emanation as not being powerful; their power is immeasurable. One Principality can knock out and protect us from thousands and thousands of dark entities or any force of negativity around us.

Well, that sure is Hieronymous. He stands there with his spear in hand. I've stood with him on guard on many occasions where he just stands there powerfully.

Hieronymous has nothing to say about himself. He seems rather single-minded, with protection of God in mind. He says I'm very close to God and he was asked to protect me. He says I know him because I know God. He says God asked him to watch over me. I said, "You and 5 other angels," and he says I need protection. He says I'm a leader and God has designated me for a special purpose so I get his personal protector in Hieronymous.

He says he has no personal life, no personal ambitions, none of the things we do here. He guards. That's it. He says he's an extension of God. He created him. I think he protects me but he doesn't understand me. I'm trying to set up him and Jerimal, my female throne, and he just laughs. They just don't do relationships. He is a curious being. I think he doesn't understand me as much as I don't understand him but he seems to humour me.

He says, "I serve. That is my life."
